Said He Had Confessed.

Charges were made that Warszawiak was a liar and untrustworthy, and in March, 1897, the then City Mission Society announced that the missionary had confessed to wrong doing. It then became known that Anthony Comstock, at the suggestion of Morris K. Jesup, of the Society for the Suppression of Vice, and former Detective Charles Heidelberg had shadowed him, and they declared that they had followed him to gambling houses in Weehawken and had seen him wisti disorderly houses in the city. Photographs were presented to substantiate their assertions, but Warszawiak stolidly dehied everything, and found a fearless champion in Dr. Hall. Nevertheless, he was expelled as a member of the Fifth Avenue Prechylerian Church.

Ally in His Wife.

But he found friends, and with Dr. Hall foremost he fought sturdily for a rehearing and readmission to the fold, not the weakest of his supporters being his wife, who on one occasion created a scene on Sunday in the church when her husband's dismissal was being announced.

She is also a convert, but did not change her faith until several years after he did, during which time they lived apart. The case was finally taken before the Judicial Committee of the General Assembly last May, and again before the session of the New York Preshytery held in Troy last month, when it was again delayed.
